

REACH Winter Newsletter

REACH's first project, FIRE, is starting data collection across London trusts.

Great news!! FIRE is well on its way, after securing HRA approval and central sponsorship from Imperial College Healthcare NHS Trust we have received R&D approval at 9 local sites and another 14 are nearly ready. Well done to everyone involved for all their hard work. Next steps are identifying cases and creating site files with these. Please don't forget to send the REACH team an email confirming all team members who had REDCap training and send in their GCP certificate. We are excited to start data collection asap.

Paeds Priority Setting Project (PaedsPSP)

Are you a London-based paediatric doctor?

We have launched our Paediatric priority setting project and would be very grateful if you could get involved.

We invite you to submit questions that are important to you, are relevant in day-to-day paediatric practice and address gaps in the evidence. Submitted questions will be sorted and sent back to you to prioritise. A final set of top questions will be used to inform further research, for REACH projects or beyond.

Please take part using the following link: <https://forms.gle/jscV7T2w6HGEKSGh8> or QR code below.

PEAR study

Thank you to all trainees that took part in the PEAR study

PEAR (Paediatric trainee Experience in multi-site Audit and Research) is a multi-centre prospective cross-sectional study to evaluate the current level of experience in research and quality improvement work amongst London paediatric trainees. This will provide baseline information and highlight unmet training needs to guide future steps.

We have now analysed all responses and are looking to publish our results soon.

Find out more about PEAR on our website.

Find us at the London School of Paediatrics Annual Conference.

Things do go wrong. But by working together and asking the right questions, we can make things better.

REACH Diversity Monitoring Form

The paediatric workforce is diverse and so are the children and young people we look after. By being representative of this diversity, we believe we would be able to address health inequalities in child health. We are a part of a much wider network of professional bodies who have a responsibility to tackle inequalities in all its forms.

REACH will be collecting diversity monitoring data of its committee members and its project leads and local REACH leads at London trusts. This will promote inclusivity and equal opportunities within the organisation and challenges elements of differential attainment within the paediatric workforce. It is vital that we collect this data in the first instance to highlight any inequality and in the future allow us to measure the impact of our work in equality, diversity and inclusivity (EDI). It will not be mandatory for any REACH member to take part in EDI surveys. Anonymised summary data will be made available via the REACH website.
